HONGKONG, OCTOBER SED. 1888.

THE Hongkong College of Medicine for Chinese held its annual prize day on Monday, the anniversary of its opening. The College has now entered upon its second year of existence, and has every reason to look back on its first year's work with gratification and to face the future with bope and confidence. Twelve months ago we expressed some misgivings as to whether the ambitious programme of the promoters could be successfully carried out, chiefly on two grounds, first, that the students likely to be obtained might not be sufficiently advanced in general education and intelligence to profit by the system of instruction adopted, and, second that the gentlemen whose names appeared as professors of the various subjects included in the curriculum might find the calls made on their time by their ordinary professional duties too great to allow of their continuing their assistance. We are glad to find that, in both respects our misgivings have been falsified by the results. There has been no interruption of the teaching year, and a fair proportion of the students proved at the examination that they have been able to make good use of the advantages afforded by the College.

Cameron, C.B., accompanied by his aids-de-comp and staff. visited the hospital ship Mecanes for the purpose of presenting a Belilios Medal to Lo Sow, a coolie employed in the hospital, for saving life. On the 26th August one of the deck coolies who was employed in cleaning the outside of the ressel, lost his footing and fell into the sea. He drifted rapidly down with the strong current, and it was thought that his life could not be saved, when Lo Sow, who is a man fifty years of age but a fine swimmer, plunged in, and after a great deal of difficulty succeeded in reaching the drowning man. A life buoy was thrown overboard, and after struggling to it with the although I cannot but regard them as flattering, an indictment for conspiracy it was not becesman in his arms, he managed to pass it under his body and keep him affeat until he was picked up. great risk, and the recipient of the medal was quite worthy of such recognition. He also said that there had been another case of theft a few minutes earlier, at the fore and of the ship and that the onlprit had been made fast At 6 a.m. I came up on deck again, and he then told me that the thief was dead. When he said on the provious occasion that the man had been made fast, I thought that they had put him in irons. The dead body was brought up to the bridge, and I saw it there. It was covered up with canvas. Loculd see no marks or bruises on the face. I did not examine the rest of his countant to take charge of. Wong Ying had body because I did not imagine that there was anything wrong. The gunner, sarang, and watchman then brought to me the five men who had charged deceased with the theft. They said that the man had been caught in the act of pull ing away a trunk belonging to one of them, and that they had seized him and handed him over To Xip, brother to deceased, then made a state ment to the effect that he had seen the five defend ants tie his brother up to the side of the shir with ropes and bear him unmercifully on the head and face with their fists. The reason was because he was seasick. He did not go to his aid because the assailants were five to one. could not call help because all the other Chinese were sessick. It was very rough weather and the ship was rolling about a lot. He could not understand the captain's statement that the weather was calm. His brother died when he

CHINESE IN AUSTRALIA

The N. C. Daily News publishes the following from a travelling correspondent :- Among was wheeling the ore and the refuse stone from the month of the shaft to the hopper shoots. The man had a soft billycook hat slouched, brim down, over his face in colonial style; a short clay pipe in his mouth; a red figured shirt; cordurer suit, with straps below the knees; and heavy boots. There was a slight tremor in his voice such as one hears in those of German seamen gruff Englishman or a Yankee sailor delights to do. His slight hands, greenish complexion, and somewhat prognathous physiognomy suggested a Chinaman and lot it was a "Mougolian." Most if not all the Chinese in Australia come from Canton, and this specimen was soon explaining humbly in his own language that he came from Sin-hwei: in reply to a query why could they trust to the evidence of that witness? he had out off his pigtail, he produced that orthey are safer from insult in such attire); but occasionally wearing Chinese shoes or a hybrid "go for" it.

The Band and Albion Mine which is the most that the statement made by him in his opening flourishing of the Ballarat gold mines is not far from the Wo Hap. Even the Wo Hap employs sic., speak well of their employers, and not over hadly of the inoffensive Chinese mates, whose only orime is being cheap, and looking out for a wife occasionally. The general view of the European miner may be gathered from the following: "Oh! they'se not bad chaps them Chinese; only they'se so dirty in their habits, and won't spend snything, you know. Besides. they plays old 'Arry with the girls. If they'd only bring their wives with them and settle down, we wouldn't mind so much; but they goes a-sellin' of handkerchers and sich like to them Irish girls, so smooth spoken, and so on, that the girls gets to like em. And the Chinaman makes a very good husband, too; he cooks for them, dresses them up, makes the fire, washes the clothes, and lets them do just what they like, because he's always afraid, don't you see, that if he didn't, well, the girls would take up with some other fellow, don't you see; and they're always a frightenin' of him that way. But they don't do us any harm. Only we don't want their blood mixed with ours. We can put up with them as we've got, but we don't want no more." Still the Chinaman seems out of his element in Australia; at least in the winter; he looks mean and pinched, and even the youngest of them lose their freshness in this dry cold climate. As regetable gardeners,-their chief compation,they are unsurpassed, but, when they come in as cheap carpenters, the ire of the 12/a day men is naturally aroused. The chief shaft of the Band of Hope and Albion Claims (now one) is about 1,500 feet deep. and the truck containing four men is about three feet square. One truck comes up as the other goes down, and a steel cable winding round a huge wheel revolved by machinery, keeps the two trucks perpetually balanced. When the stuff is brought up it is wheeled off on rails to either the shoot for waste stone or the shoot for ore, which last conducts to the steam crushers. Phese steam crushers are worked on exactly the same principle as the steam rice bruisers which one can see at Singapore. Water is conducted into the crushers, and the muddy liquid is allowed to run over a series of felts which catch the gold dust. The refuse sand contains a large quantity of pyrites, and this is dried in a furnace and again churned with water. An ingenious arrangement with quicksilver now separates the gold from the refuse, which is sold for paint, whilst the waste water is finally carried into the river. The whole process is very complicated and interesting, and of course the obtaining of spitable levels and a never-failing water supply is half the battle. At present the Band and Albion is washing one ounce per ton, exclusive of the pyrites, which are uncertain, but occasionally yield 4 ounces the ton With the exception of the two Wo Haps, almost all the mines and miners are Europea In Melbourne there is one street pretty well given up to Chinese, and in Sydney a considerable number of good Chinese shops is to be found at the foot of George street, near the William Barton said-I am a fireman aboard Circular Quay.
